Coil announces promotion of David Coil to executive vice president

COLUMBIA, MO (December 6, 2016) - Coil Construction is pleased to announce that David Coil has been promoted to executive vice president.

David joined Coil Construction full time in 2007 after graduating from Southern Methodist University in Dallas. David earned his master's of business administration from the University of Missouri-Columbia's execMBA program.

In his new role, David focuses on project development and oversight of the company's daily operations, performing such duties as: personnel management, project support services, and directing Coil's facilities management division.

Starting off as a field laborer in high school, David's field training provided a foundation for his work in managing Coil's safety program and field personnel. "Working in construction reminds me that every day is different, filled with challenges and opportunities to learn something new," said Coil.

David is a member of the American Concrete Institute and is certified as a LEED Green Associate by the Green Building Certification Institute (GBCI). He also serves as vice president of the Board of Directors at Woodhaven and president of MU's execMBA Alumni Association.

"David has played an integral role in Coil's commitment to building community for the future," said Randy Coil, president. "He is a leader in the industry, from green building to technology, while still maintaining Coil's focus on partnering and building relationships with our clients."

Established in 1975, Coil Construction specializes in institutional, retail, professional, industrial, Greek housing and healthcare construction throughout the Midwest, with an emphasis on construction projects in Missouri.
