Coil team members earn certifications

COLUMBIA, MO (September 9, 2021) – Coil Construction is pleased to announce that team members have earned additional professional certifications.

Don Prose earned his Professional Engineer (P.E.) designation. The Principles and Practice of Engineering (PE) exam tests for a level of competency in a particular engineering discipline. Prose joined the Coil team in 2011 as a project manager and has overseen projects for both new construction and remodels. He also earned his Project Manager Professional (P.M.P) certification last year.

Maggie Schneider earned her National Council for Interior Design Qualification (NCIDQ) designation. The NCIDQ examination is the broad-based exam for all interior designers and serves as the foundation from which to build for those moving into specialty design areas. Schneider joined the Coil team 2019 as a project manager. Her main responsibilities include project management and interior design consultation.

Established in 1975, Coil Construction specializes in institutional, retail, professional, industrial, and health care construction throughout the Midwest, with an emphasis on commercial construction projects in Missouri.
