Coil welcomes new project executive to team

COLUMBIA, MO (May 8, 2020) – Coil Construction is pleased to announce the addition of a new project executive to its team, Steve Torres.

A native of California, Torres joined Coil Construction in March 2020. As project executive, Torres will serve as an owner's advocate and representative, coordinating design efforts, developing plans, and managing project budgets. Torres will also oversee project schedules and ensure Coil Construction's clients receive the best experience possible throughout a project's duration.

Torres holds a bachelor's degree in business administration from California State University-Fresno. His experience spans a wide range of custom residential, health care, hospitality, biotechnology, pharmaceutical, microelectronics and commercial projects. In addition, he has been a business owner of a construction management firm, serving a variety of clients in a full-service capacity.

Established in 1975, Coil Construction specializes in institutional, retail, professional, industrial, and health care construction throughout the Midwest, with an emphasis on commercial construction projects in Missouri.
